About the Museum.....

The DVHAA Wings of Freedom Aviation Museum was established to provide an informative and educational environment for the community. The assemblage of aircraft and content of exhibits at the Museum represents and spans several eras in the history of aviation: early aviation achievements of the Wright Brothers and Harold F. Pitcairn, World War I, World War II, The Korean War, The Vietnam War, and The Cold War Era. Based on the number of historical aircraft currently on display, our museum is ranked in the top three civil and military aviation museums in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

dedicated to Frank Piasecki

Frank Nicholas Piasecki was born in 1919 in Philadelphia. He studied aeronautical engineering at the University of Pennsylvania and the New York University Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, graduating in 1940. While still in college, he founded the P-V Engineering Forum with classmates, Harold Venzie and Don Myers. In 1943, Piasecki's group designed the PV-2, a single-seat, single-rotor helicopter that became the second successful helicopter to fly in the United States. He became the first person in the United States to qualify for a helicopter pilot's license. Piasecki's efforts attracted the attention of U.S. Navy, which gave him a contract to design a large tandem-rotor helicopter capable of carrying heavy loads. In 1945, the HRP-1, first tandem-rotor helicopter and the first helicopter designed for the U.S. Navy, emerged. It was popularly called the "Flying Banana." Piasecki's tandem-rotor design laid the groundwork for many of today's successful helicopters, including the CH-47 Chinook. The company grew into the Piasecki Helicopter Corp. In 1955, he left Piasecki Helicopter and formed Piasecki Aircraft Corp. Frank Piasecki was awarded more than 20 patents and received numerous other awards.
